

Aaron Kay's research focuses on the relation between motivation, implicit social cognition, and social issues. He has a particular interest in how basic motivations and needs manifest as specific social, organizational, and societal beliefs. These include (but are not limited to) the causes and consequences of stereotyping and system justification, religious belief, political ideology, and the attitudes people hold towards their organizations and institutions. Only 6 years post-PhD, Dr. Kay has published over 30 empirical papers (at journals including, Psychological Science, Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, Journal of Consumer Research, & Journal of Experimental Social Psychology) and has published 2 edited books. He is currently Associate Editor at the Journal of Experimental Social Psychology (and is a past Associate Editor at Social Justice Research).

Aaron Kay has been awarded the SAGE Young Scholar Award from the Foundation of Personality and Social Psychology (2010), the Early Career Contribution Award from the International Society of Justice Researchers (2010), the Early Researchers Award from the Ontario Ministry of Research and Innovation (2009), and Dissertation Awards from the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues (2006) and the Society of Experimental Social Psychology (runner-up; 2006). His research has appeared in many media outlets, including the New York Times, Boston Globe, Wall Street Journal, Psychology Today, Financial Times, among others.