Duke Professor Awarded Fellowship

Campbell R. Harvey, an associate professor of finance at Duke University's Fuqua School of Business, recently received the 1993 Batterymarch Fellowship and will receive $75,000 for research of financial and investment theories, a spokesman for the university said.

Harvey's research focuses on new techniques for international asset allocation. He is currently studying risk and predictability of equity returns in emerging capital markets, a release says.

The fellowship was established in 1980 by the Boston-based Batterymarch Financial Management Corp. The firm was established in 1969 and currently manages $5.7 billion of assets.
