Duke will offer class on Web

DURHAM - Duke University's business school will offer live broadcasts of a class on the World Wide Web beginning next month for working students.

The one-of-a-kind course on global asset allocation and stock selection will be broadcast live Mondays and Thursdays beginning Jan. 22. Duke said it will be the first university to offer a live Web broadcast of a regularly scheduled Master's of Business Administration course to students outside its campus.

The course costs $1,000 for non-Duke students and $500 for Duke alumni. All registered students will receive a user name and password that will provide access to the site.
