Two-thirds of the US dollar rose to suppress large exporters said business

Hang giant network compiled according to Guo Qing 2015-03-12 00:48
In a new survey, business executives say, the US dollar is strong, the trauma of the exporters, but also may suppress investment plan for next year.

Wednesday's Duke University and CFO Magazine Global Business Outlook Survey quarterly to global business executives about 1000 - mostly financial officer - were investigated.

About two-thirds of large US exporters - at least a quarter of the sales department at the foreign manufacturers - said the dollar for their business caused by the attacks. Nearly a quarter of large exporters that they therefore cut capital spending plans.

Executives in many industries - from construction industry to manufacturing to health care industry - that the strength of the US dollar against most major currencies, emerging risks in the past six months, the development of the.

"We are waiting to see the euro area, Japan or the Canadian currency against the US dollar is the largest decline, China could be the next one," Duke University business school professor Campbell R. Harvey said. "US exporters are suffering from the impact of these competitive devaluation, which could lead to a profit decline, job losses."

According to the survey, nearly one-third of corporate executives expect the dollar against the euro will rise by 10%, 10% appreciation of the dollar is expected to at least competent, and 13.8% said that the exchange rate on capital spending plans will have a negative impact of 8.6% is expected to have a negative impact on hiring plans.
